"Early American Imprints" 1404

Introduction

The need for an index

Although a vast number of advertisements are available for study in early American newspapers, researchers are hampered by a lack of good indexes by which desired information can be readily found. Accordingly, if newspapers are to be used, it is reasonable to expect that many hours will be spent scanning columns of text, without any guaranty that efforts will be rewarded with useful data.

With this situation in view, I have compiled an advertisement index to the Boston Newsletter and Massachusetts Gazette, a weekly newspaper published from 1704 through the early part of 1776. This newspaper is available (as of 2000) in microfilm format from Readex Microprint in New Canaan, Connecticut.

The Boston Newsletter

The Boston Newsletter was first published in April 1704 and ceased publication in February 1776, shortly before the evacuation British troops from Boston. Charles Evans in his American Bibliography provides a brief history of the Boston Newsletter under the date 1704, which we quote in its entirety below:

> The first newspaper continuously published in what is now the United States of America. Founded by John Campbell, Postmaster. After No. 5. "Sold at the Post Office" takes the place of Boone in the imprint until November 10, 1707, when John Allen became the printer until October 8, 1711. At this date the printing was resumed by Bartholomew Green "for John Campbell, Postmaster," to December, 1721. After which it was "Printed and sold by B. Green," to December, 1726. In January, 1727, Green changed the name to "The Weekly News-letter," beginning it No. 1. In November, 1730, the name was again changed to "The Boston Weekly Newsletter" and the 1196 numbers which had been dropped added, the number at that date being 1396, and so continued to the death of Green, 28 December, 1732. Beginning with January 1733, the paper was "Printed and sold by John Draper," his son-in-law, up to the time of his death, 29 November, 1762. The publication was continued by his son, Richard Draper, who, in January, 1763, altered the title to, "The Boston Weekly News-letter and New-England Chronicle," changing it again in about a year to "The Massachusetts Gazette, and Boston News-letter," and taking in his kinsman, Samuel Draper, as a partner. Samuel Draper, died in March, 1767, and Richard remained the sole publisher to May, 1768, when, up to September, 1769, the publication was singularly divided with The Boston Post-Boy, by order of the Government, as "The Massachusetts Gazette." In September, 1769, the title of "The Massachusetts Gazette and Boston Weekly News-letter" was resumed. In May, 1774, Draper took John Boyle into partnership. His death occurring in June, his widow Margaret Draper succeeded him, with Boyle, who was a tory, as a partner for a short time. After the beginning of the revolutionary war the paper was conducted by her, with John Howe as partner, until the evacuation of Boston by the British Troops, in 1776, when the publication of the "News-letter" ceased, and was never revived. No complete file is known. The New York Historical Society has a file of the first four years nearly complete, and about half the numbers between 1704 and 1720 are in the Massachusetts Historical Society.

During the early years of publication, the Boston Newsletter typically had two pages per issue, with two columns of text per page. The advertisements were placed at the bottom of the second column on the second page. During the first two or three decades the number of advertisements was very small (usually not more than 10 per issue), and during the first few years some issues had no advertisements at all. By the late 1760s, the Boston Newsletter typically consisted of four pages with three columns of text per page. Supplements and extra editions were published with the result that four to eight pages per week became typical. Advertisements during this period would (collectively speaking) occupy a full page (or more) per issue.

Organization of the Index

This index has an estimated 10,000-12,000 entries listing individuals, corporate entities, shop signs, taverns, ships, churches, etc. Entries frequently include employment and address information, together with a summary of other interesting details that can be gleaned from the text of the ads. The dates at the bottom of each entry refer to the dates wherein the name appeared in ads.

A directory has been prepared for users who are interested in knowing which individuals listed in the index followed certain professions (such as goldsmiths, ship captains, medical doctors) or who fell into other categories (such as run-away servants or insolvent debtors). More than 150 categories are included in the directory.

Early American imprints (i.e. books, pamphlets, etc.) that were advertised in the Boston Newsletter are enumerated in a separate section following the alphabetical listings. These early American imprints are arranged by Evans numbers. See: the National Index of American Imprints through 1800. The Short-Title Evans by Clifford K. Shipton and James E. Mooney.

Commonly used abbreviations:

BNL - Boston Newsletter
E - Extraordinary MG - Massachusetts Gazette
PS- Post Script
S - Supplement

Comprehensiveness

This index is not fully comprehensive. Information not included in the index falls into the following discreet categories:

a) Tax delinquents: Various land proprietorships and towns would sometimes name tax delinquents in advertisements and would usually list the unpaid sums that were assigned to each of them.

b) Un-retrieved letters: In many years the postmaster of the Boston Post Office would publish a list of names and addresses of the intended recipients of un-retrieved letters. These lists would often include several dozen names.

c) Ferries, wharves, and government buildings are frequently mentioned as landmarks in advertisements. These references have not been included in the index.

d) Land Bank shareholders and loan recipients: Numerous Land Bank shareholders and loan recipients were mentioned in advertisements when the bank's accounts were being settled subsequent to its dissolution. These names are not indexed.

e) Early American imprints: Certain advertised titles were not found in Shipton and Mooney's National Index of American Imprints. In some instances this may have been the case because the titles mentioned in the ads differed from the titles that appeared on the printed works; in other cases, some of the advertised titles may have remained unprinted; in still other cases, some published works may have simply escaped the notice of Shipton and Mooney.

f) Authors of non-American imprints: In instances where five or more imported titles were listed in a single advertisement, the authors have not been indexed. In cases where there are fewer than five titles listed, the authors are indexed so long as they can be unambiguously identified.

Caveat

In 18th-century Boston, it was often the case that several individuals shared the same name; John Adams, William Clark, John Kneeland, Samuel Sewall, and John Smith are all excellent examples of names which were used by several different individuals. Although I have endeavored to assign each ad to the appropriate individual, I believe that there will inevitably be instances where my assignments are incorrect, and thus will require future revision.

Future Direction

It is likely that the usefulness of this index could be enhanced by providing users with citations to various biographical dictionaries that have relevant information on indexed individuals (e.g. Sibley's Harvard Graduates).
